Restriction to one of the following inventions is required under 35 U.S.C. 121:

 Claims 1-5, 17 and 18, drawn to apparatus for testing electronic devices, classified in class 324, subclass 760.

- II. Claims 6-11, drawn to testing system for electronic devices, classified in class 324, subclass 760.
- III. Claims 12-16, drawn to a method for testing functional characteri8stics of a plurality of electronic devices, classified in class 324, subclass 760.
- IV. Claims 19-26, drawn to an active temperature control device for testing of electronic devices, classified in class 324, subclass 760.

The inventions are distinct, each from the other because:

Inventions I, II and IV in a first set and III in a second set are related as product and process of use. The inventions can be shown to be distinct if either or both of the following can be shown: (1) the process for using the product as claimed can be practiced with another materially different product or (2) the product as claimed can be used in a materially different process of using that product (MPEP § 806.05(h)). In the instant case the method of Invention III can be used without the counter-flow of coolant feature of Invention I.

Inventions II in a first set and I and IV in a second set are related as combination and subcombination. Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed because the combination does not require all of the details of either of the subcombinations. The subcombination has separate utility such as by themselves for their intended purpose or in a different combination.

Application/Control Number: 10/758,209

Inventions I and IV are related as combination and subcombination. Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed because the combination does not require all of the details of the subcombination. The subcombination has separate utility such as by itself for its intended purpose or in a different combination.

Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a separate status in the art because of their recognized divergent subject matter, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

Applicant is advised that the reply to this requirement to be complete must include an election of the invention to be examined even though the requirement be traversed (37 CFR 1.143).
